Come and join us to find out about the process of Royal National Parks and Reserves being assessed for inclusion on Australia's World Heritage Tentative List.

This project is currently underway and is considering which values Royal National Park and Reserves (RNP&R) has that meet the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation (UNESCO) criteria for inclusion of places on the World Heritage List.

The project is drawing on existing information to provide a short summary document describing the values of RNP&R and how they relate to the UNESCO criteria. This may then lead to RNP&R inclusion on Australia's Tentative World Heritage List, which is a list of places the Australian Government thinks could meet the World Heritage threshold.

Other places in NSW already on the World Heritage List include; the Sydney Opera House, Lord Howe Island Group, the Greater Blue Mountains World

Heritage Area, Willandra Lakes Region and the Gondwana Rainforests of Australia and some of the the 11 places that make up the Australian Convict Sites; the Old Great North Road, Hyde Park Barracks, Old Government House and Domain and Cockatoo Island.

The research for the RNP&R project is being undertaken by a team of heritage experts headed up by GML Heritage on behalf of the the NSW National Parks and Wildlife Service.

GML Heritage's initial research outcomes will be presented on Sunday 7th September with the final draft outcomes of this work being presented on Sunday 12th October.
